DISCUSS RUSSIAN SITUATION

controlling all the printing presses, I fear it will be a difficult thing to do of the Bolshevik regime with a stream of words from Washington.

WHAT ALLIES INTEND
"Do you think France's Russian policy is dictated by a desire to safeguard thirty billion francs worth of Russian bonds held by Frenchmen?" was the next query.

"Yes," Mr. Vanderlip was asked whether he believed the allies were genuinely interested in making the league of nations an effectively full grown organization to keep the world's peace and to shoulder important international burdens within the next five or ten years.

"The allies," said Mr. Vanderlip, "by their own actions recently have shown they do not intend that."

"There are unmistakable signs that the allies are more interested today in garnering the fruits of victory and enforcing the peace treaties than in establishing an effective league of nations."

FURTHERING OWN ENDS
"The league provides a certain definite machinery—or specifications for machinery—for keeping the world's peace, but I inquire whether the leading European nations today are actuated by the moral ideals and spirit so essential to successfully operate such machinery."

"Are they not more interested at present in furthering their own ends and ambitions than in establishing those things intended by the league's covenant?" As I see it England, France and Italy have no intention of letting slip from their hand the enforcement of the peace treaties. They are not willing today to delegate this enforcement to any league other than themselves.

LIKE A FIRE ENGINE

"The league covenant is like a fire engine. Efficiently operated in the right spirit and with co-operation of its crew, a fire can be quelled. But when each fireman nation has a different idea as to what the fire engine is for or how it should be operated and when it should be started in the business of putting out fires, it requires no little hesitancy on the part of any thoughtful man as to whether he will be a fireman on that engine."

Asked whether he thought the U. S. could remain out of the league of nations as long as the league is kept ineffective by the allies without injuring the American world position seriously, Mr. Vanderlip said:

"We have injured our foreign status already about as much as is conceivable. Staying out will not hurt us."

WOMEN SUFFRAGE ACTUALITY

retary Colby had acted to save embarrassment by signing the proclamation at his home as there had been some evident conflict between suffrage leaders as to who should arrange for the ceremonies.

"I think it a very great pity that on an occasion so momentous to millions of American women that no woman should have been with Secretary Colby when he signed this proclamation," said Mrs. Abby Scott Baker, of the National Woman's party. "Representatives of all the suffrage groups should have been present."

SAYS IT IS ENDED

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, who was due to have arrived in Washington this morning was not even at the state department when Secretary Colby announced his signature.

"We are confident that the signature of Secretary Colby completes the suffrage struggle," said Miss Alice Paul following announcement of the signature of the proclamation. In spite of every obstacle that our opponents could put in our way women have won the right to an equal voice in the affairs of the government."

Has the Small Car Owner A Right to Good Tires

THIS much is certain—that the small car owners of this country have as high quality standards as any other class of motorists. Whenever you want to see this proven out, you have only to watch how they come to good tires, when they are given an opportunity to get at them.

What some dealers seem to overlook are the reasons which have led most of the small car owners to buy their cars.

In building tires for the small car, the United States Rubber Company exercises as much care, as much thought, as much supervision, as if they were intended to go on the most expensive cars in the country.

Devoting an entire factory to their manufacture. Putting the whole weight of its varied experience behind them.

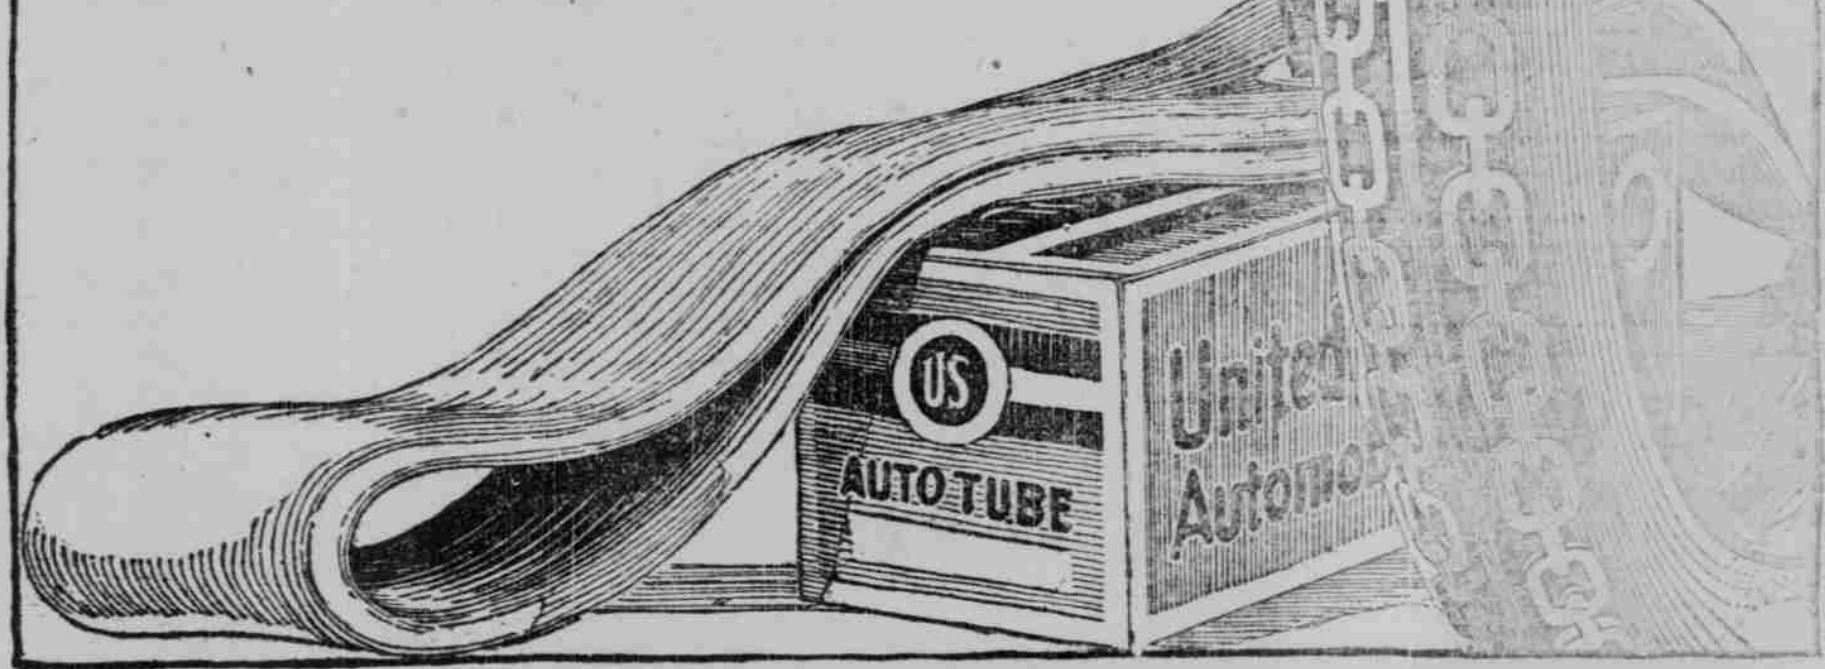

Never cheapening their quality on the mistaken theory that a man's intelligence can be judged by the length of his car's wheel base.

Good dealers will tell you that they can never get enough U.S. 30x3 1/2-inch Tires.

A hint which the small car owner who is bent on quality will always heed in time.
